As a matter of policy, LSMSA does not recommend students for full-time participation in early admission programs at colleges and universities. LSMSA is designed to meet the needs of high-achieving high school students with rigorous college-level instruction to the extent that no student is able to exhaust our curriculum. (see "Graduation Process")

To date, eight universities within the state have recognized the unique caliber of our curriculum and qualifications of our students and faculty. These universities have negotiated agreements (called articulation agreements) with LSMSA to award college credit for certain courses taken at LSMSA. There is no fee for dual enrollment or special testing, and when applied, the courses appear on the college transcript with the college's course number. LSMSA continues to seek both wider and deeper participation with all colleges and universities to provide the broadest possible college credit for LSMSA course work.
